There are so many dog owners in the surrounding apartment buildings. They really do need a green space to walk their dogs. This site would be perfect. I do notice a lot of little dogs in the neighborhood. If dogs will be allowed in the park at all, there should be a ring around the outside of the whole park designated for dogs to do their business, rather than just on one side of the park. Then the space within that ring can be "safe" for sitting on, etc. people won't take their dogs all the way aross the park to pee, it's just a fact. I own a dog and dog parks are important. This is too small a site. Pedro Park should feel like a clean, safe space to relax and view the Core buildings from the Northwestern Precinct. The park should attract people nearby, mostly by being safe and friendly. There are many dog owners in the Rossmor who don't bother to walk to Wacouta Commons or Mears. Pedro could provide a nice option for them aside from the Rossmor parking lot. I don't want the whole park to be for dogs, however.
